

Winslow is located on the I-40 corridor in Northeast Arizona on the western border of Navajo County 58 miles east of Flagstaff. The famed Route 66 was the major east-west route through Winslow before I-40 replaced it. The city is named after General Edward Winslow, the vice president of the Atlantic Pacific Railroad Company in 1880. Today, the company is the Burlington Northern Santa Fe (BNSF). Winslow was established as and remains a division point for the railroad. It can be noted that BNSF is the largest employer in Winslow. Prior to being an established city, civilizations had thrived in the area for centuries. The Ancient Hopi Village of Homolovi and the Mormon settlement of Brigham City were a few. With its rich history, friendly people, diverse culture and proximity to many wonders of northern Arizona, Winslow is a wonderful small city.

Principal Economic Activities

Winslow has a diversified economy poised for growth with transportation, tourism, two large medical facilities, education and retail. Winslow's economy is supported by its direct access to national forests, I-40, State Highway 87, the BNSF Railroad, ample ground and surface water supply, a terrific airport and an abundant amount of land zoned for industrial, residential and commercial development.

Scenic Attractions

Winslow's attractions include a 9/11 Memorial Park featuring two large construction beams that are actual wreckage from the Twin Towers. Other attractions include the world famous Standin' on the Corner Park, city and regional history at the Old Trails Museum, fresh water recreation at McHood Park Clear Creek Reservoir, ancient Hopi ruins at Homolovi State Park and the majestic scenery at the Little Painted Desert County Park. The historic Hubbell Trading Post Company is now the visitor center/museum, and the incomparable La Posada Hotel has been ranked as one of the best hotels in Arizona. There are several day trips for which Winslow serves as a good base camp. These trips include the Grand Canyon, Meteor Crater, the Petrified Forest, Sunset Crater, Canyon De Chelly and Walnut Canyon.

Community Facilities

Winslow has a library, five parks, an indoor swimming pool, an outdoor pool and several basketball, racquetball and tennis courts. Athletic facilities also include soccer, football and baseball fields. Winslow has an active adult community center along with a couple of senior living residential and medical centers. There is also a skate park, a walking path, a conference facility and indoor and outdoor concert/event venues.
